

Educational Specialist Degree Program in School Psychology

[At UW-Eau Claire]

The graduate program in school psychology is a three-year, 67-credit program that prepares students to practice school psychology in public schools. The program is approved by the National Association of School Psychologists, permitting students to qualify for the National Certified School Psychologist license.

The school psychology program aims to:

- Develop a practitioner who can provide a broad range of diagnostic and intervention services emphasizing the behavioral, but including clinical, medical and educational perspectives.
- Develop direct service competencies.
- Develop research skills.

The school psychology program provides the following unique educational opportunities:

- Collaboration with faculty in research projects.
- The Human Development Center, the campus interdisciplinary clinic, provides high quality, low cost diagnostic services to clients of all ages. Students from school psychology, communication disorders, special education, social work, reading and nursing collaborate to provide a complete assessment and recommendations for intervention.
- The Psychological Services Center provides behavioral and counseling interventions in the clinic on campus or in clients' homes.
- School psychology students provide culturally appropriate diagnostic and intervention services to children and families on the Lac Du Flambeau Indian reservation.
- School psychology students assist local Hmong children and families through tutoring and other education-related services.

Program content

The school psychology program is a three-year program. The MSE school psychology degree, the first 31 credits of graduate course work, provides academic background, introduction to research, professional seminars, and practice in diagnostic and intervention skills. The MSE degree is granted upon completion of all required course work and successful performance on the written comprehensive examination.

The remaining two years are devoted to the Educational Specialist degree. During the second year of the program students complete 36 credits, including course work in educational foundations and methods, and the thesis. The focus of this year is the two-semester practicum placement in the public schools and participation in interdisciplinary clinical practice at the HDC on campus. Completion of all required course work and successful defense of the thesis result in a recommendation for the initial five-year license in school psychology. Students also complete the National Association of School Psychologists Professional Examination.

The internship phase, consisting of six credits, is the capstone of the school psychology program. Students complete 1,200 hours of supervised professional practice as school psychologists.

Successful completion of the internship and the NASP Professional Examination qualifies the student for the National Certified School Psychologist license and the educational specialist degree.

Financial aid

The school psychology program provides financial support for all school psychology students who desire it. The financial support includes:

- A limited number of graduate assistantships and fellowships.
- Part-time employment with local agencies serving individuals with exceptional needs.
- Work study positions providing opportunities for research and other work related to the profession.

Placement

All UW-Eau Claire graduates find employment upon completion of the program, many in school districts in which they complete their internships. Most graduates, by choice, remain in Wisconsin and Minnesota, but can also be found in many other states.
